Arizona Association for Play Therapy

Who We Are

Established in 1993, the Arizona Association for Play Therapy (AZAPT) is a state branch of the Association for Play Therapy, Inc. AZAPT seeks to:

- advance the discipline of play therapy;
- conduct and foster programs of education in the field of play therapy;
- provide a networking resource for all members;
- advance the standards of professional conduct through education, professional meetings, and conferences;
- inform and educate the general public and the mental health community about the play therapy profession;
- establish contracts with various organizations for support and educational pursuits; and
- advocate for the rights of children, their families and significant others.

Why Play Therapy?

For children, play is recognized as one of the most natural modes of learning and interacting with others. It is through play that children often express their feelings, explore themselves and their relationships, and attempt to understand their experiences. Children may be able to transfer their anxieties, fears, and guilt through toys rather than adults. Through play therapy, children may be able to increase their feelings of self-worth and self-acceptance with the help of a caring relationship with an adult. Children are encouraged to understand their play as a way to express, explore, and work through conflicts and issues. Play therapy also promotes the exploration of feelings and behaviors associated with past events and issues outside of the playroom.
